Appendix A: Information on Classroom Doors; also Link to Video on Active Shooter Training

Email from Chief Moorman with email from Vice Chancellor David Rainer included

Dr. Moore,

In reference to your email, please see Mr. Rainer's response to Xxx on October 8. In particular, if you are not familiar with the video at the link in Mr. Rainer's last bullet point, this video is something that we highly recommend that all members of our campus community watch. Active Shooter situations are dynamic and change very quickly, and the appropriate response is determined by the specifics of each situation. We have bought the rights to show this video to all of our students, faculty and staff and it is available for anyone with a unity ID to log into and watch. What this video does is educate members of our community on how they can respond if an Active Shooter situation does occur. Please be assured that we have given consideration to every aspect of safety on campus and these are very complex issues. Having locking doors on classrooms, for example, could also allow the opportunity for a suspect to enter a classroom and lock the door to give them more time by delaying the entry of law enforcement and preventing the escape of students. Additionally, there could be a situation where students who might be seeking shelter in a classroom, have to remain in the open because the classroom doors are locked. We appreciate the input that everyone provides and give careful consideration to all alternatives.

Chief Moorman

Subject: Re: Campus Safety

Xxx:

Yes, I have some thoughts on this but wanted to check in with our police chief before I responded since he was not party to the original decision.

There are pros and cons to the issue of being able to lock classroom doors and after Virginia Tech there has been much discussion on campuses nationwide including ours about utility of being able to lock classrooms. After Virginia Tech an NC State campus emergency planning group reached the decision that there was "no benefit" for campus to being able to lock classroom doors.

During our discussions the following were discussed:

It is likely that someone with a weapon could easily defeat a lock. If possible during a shooting incident barricade the door with chairs or furniture.

Almost all classroom doors have a side light or glass in the door. This standard was adopted because of the preference that someone from the outside could look in to the classroom and this was paramount for faculty safety.

In an emergency police could see into the room.

All police officers in NC receive active shooter response training.

University police drill for active shooter response.

University Police provide active shooter response training on request to any student or employee group.
