Urban myths about TurnItIn

- It is applied to all courses and all student submissions
- The originality score in and of itself is an effective way to determine plagiarism
- All the submissions become TurnItIn's property
 - The work is not displayed for public consumption
 - NC State will purchase a 'node'
- It is only a policing tool
 - Implications of both false positives and negatives

Elements of TurnItIn

- Originality Check – the plagiarism ‘engine’ of the software
- WriteCheck – a tool for students as they write papers which includes a grammar checker (similar to the tools used by ETS for evaluating written pieces) and instantaneous evaluation of originality.
- Feedback Studio/Revision Assistant – has a range of tools and allows the development of rubrics to grade papers submitted electronically

Engage Students

Students see source matches and instructor feedback directly on their work, or in a conveniently formatted downloadable report.

The implementation plan

- Developing an ‘honor-code culture’
 - The Pack Pledge - “I have neither given nor received unauthorized aid on this test or assignment”
- Ensuring that policies promote a culture and learning environment where academic integrity is emphasized and implemented
- Provide training for both faculty and students
- Assess the impact of the tool
