I trained as a large animal surgery resident at the CVM in the mid 90s and returned to NCSU in fall 2001 as a Veterinary Teaching Hospital clinician, within the Department of Clinical Sciences. In 2012 I moved to the Department of Molecular Biomedical Sciences and began in my role as a teaching-track professor of veterinary anatomy.

Approaching 20 years on the faculty at the CVM, I seek to participate in service to the wider university community. I recognize the importance and value of the Faculty Senate's voice in shared governance of the university and my intent is to actively contribute and be an effective representative for my CVM faculty colleagues.
